Our Candidates

The nomination of Blaine and Logan has been received with the heartiest enthusiasm by the Republicans of this country, the voters who are always relied upon to carry the Presidential election. Nor is this enthusiasm confined to any particular class, as the laborer, the mechanic, the merchant and the capitalist recognize that in the nomination of James G. Blaine and John A. Logan the Republican party has placed their banner in [illegible] hands. They know that with these two distinguished statesmen at the head of the Government their respective interests and rights will be zealously guarded and they will be found working side by side in the campaign this fall which is sure to result in a glorious Republican victory.

Neither is this feeling of satisfaction confined to the Republican party alone, as there are many Democrats in the country who will be glad to vote for the Republican ticket. This is especially true in Maine. Personally we have received assurances from several Democrats in this city who will vote for Mr. Blaine and the candid opinion of men in that party competent to view the situation as it exists is that the Democrats will not stand a ghost of a chance to accomplish anything in this State this fall. The Boston Herald, which, by the way, occasionally gets the truth in its columns, by interviewing someone outside its establishment, publishes a conversation with a Democratic editor of this State who says referring to Mr. Blaine's nomination:

"It will make Maine a Republican state by a tremendous majority. Because in that State Mr. Blaine's personal popularity cannot be disputed. He has a few personal enemies, but, taking it all together, Democrats and Republicans admire him, and will largely support him. In the city of Augusta where he has lived for 25 years, beyond a doubt he will get fully three-quarters of the Democratic vote."

"Why do Maine Democrats like him?"

"Because they believe he is a big, live, goahead, wideawake, double-headed man. Personally he has not an enemy in the State, and I do not think there is a Democrat in Maine who would not like to vote for him if it were not so inconsistent with his duty to his party."

The feeling that the Republican National Convention nominated the strongest ticket ever put in the field is general from Maine to California, a delegation from the latter State being now on their way to Maine to pay their respects to the next President. The opposition press attempt to make some capital out of the announcement that certain so-called Republican journals will withhold their support from the Republican nominees. But what does this signify? What is the influence these journals exercise over the great public mind? Read your answer in the result of the great convention just closed in Chicago. These very newspapers have kept up and [illegible] an unceasing [illegible] upon Mr. Blaine ever since he has been prominently identified with the politics of this country; they have lied about him and resorted to the lowest and meanest tricks to deceive the people, but notwithstanding all this he is the most popular man in the country to-day. The filth that has been thrown from the editorial rooms of these few papers has not left a stain upon him for whom it was intended, but has simply returned to its natural source to defile those who were dirty enough before.

The representatives fresh from the people have just placed in nomination the ablest and most popular leader in the Nation, associating with him a man who has won honor on the field of battle as well as in the halls of Congress, and the people who are now holding ratification meetings all over the country in November next will see to it that the action of the convention is handsomely ratified at the polls.

The Next President and Vice President.

WHAT THE LEADING REPUBLICAN PAPERS SAY.

[New York Tribune.]

James G. Blaine has been nominated by the people, and will be elected by the people. For a quarter of a century no other candidate has been more clearly preferred by the voters. Patronage had no part in his nomination. Even in the hour of their defeat his opponents did not attribute his success to any unworthy influence. By them it was admitted, as it must be admitted by all, that the people desired the nomination of Mr. Blaine. The National Convention wisely preferred him to any other representative of his ideas. Having deliberately adopted those ideas in its platform, the convention has selected Mr. Blaine himself to represent them.

Mr. Blaine has been nominated as an advocate of protection. His opinions on the tariff question need no explanation, and his nomination will be hailed with the utmost enthusiasm by the friends of the protective tariff in every part of the land. In nominating Mr. Blaine, moreover, the convention adopts the idea that no form of servile labor can be tolerated in this country. Whether the serf comes from China or from Hungary, the Republican party objects. At the same time, the convention proposes to educate American labor, so that it may be better fitted for the responsibilities of self-government. Mr. Blaine's remarkable letter on this subject, which was derided by some opponents, finds a response in the Republican platform, and the convention reminded it when it nominated its candidate. Mr. Blaine is the strongest candidate the Republican party could have nominated, because he best represents its convictions.

Those who supported President Arthur, Senator Edmunds, and other candidates with so much zeal and fidelity deserve honor for their conscientious efforts, but yet they will realize before many days, we feel sure, that the people were wiser than most of their leaders. The name of Mr. Blaine had been so identified with the economic policy which the Republican party holds most dear, that the popular preference for him, at a time when that policy was threatened by a Democratic majority in Congress, was exceedingly natural. On this account, Mr. Blaine's friends believe, he will receive more votes than could have been secured by any other candidate in the Pacific States, in West Virginia, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York.

The nomination of General Logan for Vice President was also especially fortunate. He has great strength at the West, and with the soldiers everywhere, and his name will kindle the enthusiasm of Republicans at the South. The ticket cannot be beaten. Blaine and Logan will carry every Northern State, and probably more than one of the Southern States beside. Once more the Republican party has proved its right to rule by the wisdom of its choice. It represents the people again, and the people will not fail to justify its confidence in their sagacity and their patriotic feeling.

[Boston Traveller.]

The same earnestness and spirit which have at last placed the standard of the party in Mr. Blaine's hands will go far to help him [illegible] to victory. There are some Republican elements to be conciliated, and some apprehensions to be removed. The personal phase of the hostility to Mr. Blaine in certain quarters has already done its worst, and is not to be seriously feared. Already the recoil from the virulence with which he has been assailed is distinctly felt. The work of detraction has been overdone, and the ever-potent instinct of American fair play may be trusted to assert itself. * * * *

Mr. Blaine is now the nominee of the National Republican party for President and Massachusetts can well afford, now that he is so by her own default, to sink all petty regrets, forget all past antagonisms, and rally once more around the grand old banner of the Republican cause. Party loyalty demands this, and patriotic duty forbids anything else. Nor is it to be doubted that when the Republicans of this State come to view the Chicago nomination in all its aspects they will find in it an appeal to that New England pride which they share in common with their brethren in Maine. For the first time in its history the Republican party has nominated a New Englander for the chief magistracy of the Nation, and for the first time in three decades an opportunity offers to place an Eastern statesman in the chair of Washington. He will not fail to reach it for want of the fourteen electoral votes of Massachusetts.

[Boston Journal.]

It is sufficient for us, as members of the Republican party, to know that Mr. Blaine is to lead the party in the coming campaign. He is to stand upon a platform which was adopted by the Republican delegates, and to give him, therefore, as the accepted leader, cordial support, is a duty which every Republican owes to the party. Of the election of Mr. Blaine there is very little question. The campaign thus far has shown his wonderful strength with the people. We confess that the spontaneous movement for Mr. Blaine at the West is something unprecedented. No effort on his part was made to secure delegates. They flocked to his banner as soon as it was raised at Chicago. And his supporters are not political adventurers of the noisy element which is found in every party. They represent the best type of Americans and the strongest Republicanism. In this State there is a feeling of opposition to Mr. Blaine, which makes it more difficult for many Republicans to admit that his supporters are among the ablest and most conscientious in their respective communities. This we shall come to understand and appreciate as the contest proceeds. We do not underrate the disadvantages incident to a campaign under his leadership, but we must not lose sight of the assurance given at Chicago that he possesses a following greater than that of any other man in the party. He is the choice of the Republican Convention—honestly and fairly nominated, and as such will receive the cordial support of the men who have voted for Lincoln, Grant, Hayes and Garfield.

[Philadelphia North American.]

While the North American urged the nomination of President Arthur from motives of sound public policy, as well as in merited recognition of his distinguished services, it can most fully congratulate Mr. Blaine on his triumph as the standard-bearer of the Republican party, and as earnestly promise its best support in the notable struggle about to begin. If we have any regrets that the convention did not deem it practicable to name the President as his own successor, we freely admit that its choice was bestowed upon one of the most distinguished men of the times in which we live, and upon a Republican whose public services constitute his sufficient voucher. It is a satisfaction to know that out of a struggle that has not been exceeded in closeness by any since the Republican party was organized, there has come no hasty and inconsiderate choice, and, as we believe, none of the bitterness which outlives the heat in which it is engendered.

The popularity of James G. Blaine has never been seriously questioned. Though he has twice been before the party in National Convention assembled, only to be denied success, his following seemed to increase under defeat, and he is to-day probably nearer to the hearts of the Republican masses than ever before. His nomination must be regarded as a deferred honor, and it cannot be less valued by him because it was deferred. On all great questions of public policy Mr. Blaine has a record that cannot be mistaken or misinterpreted. He is popular, brilliant and pronounced, and his name will create that enthusiasm which frequently determines political results.

[Providence Press.]

For the first time since Gen. Grant was unanimously nominated for a second term, at Philadelphia, twelve years ago, the Republican party enters a presidential campaign with its most popular leader for its standard-bearer. For the first time since 1872 the man who was the choice of a majority of the Republicans in the states that are expected to give Republican majorities in November, carries off the most distinguished honor and the highest political prize which it is in the power of the Republican party to bestow. The announcement of the nomination of James G. Blaine, on the fourth ballot, at Chicago, yesterday afternoon, was received with more enthusiastic demonstrations of joy than would have been manifested upon the success of either of the other candidates, and to-day the country enters upon a Presidential campaign which will be memorable in the political history of the Nation for the progress and vigor with which it will be prosecuted by the Republicans. Close up the ranks! Forward, to victory!

[Providence Journal.]

Of the hearty and cordial acceptance of the nomination by the great majority of the Republican party we think no doubt. The name of Blaine will arouse a great enthusiasm, and the selection of Logan will strengthen the support of those who proved their devotion to Republican principles in war as in peace. There is yet, as the country evidently perceives, much to be done before the Nation can safely entrust its interests in other hands than those of the Republicans. The questions still at issue are of the highest importance; they must be contested with persistence and with vigor. The people, as to the most vital of them, are in accord with the Republican party, and therefore it is that its success in November is already assured.

Returning will leave Halifax, Monday, June 16th at 7.15 A. M., arriving at Annapolis, 1.05 P. M., Digby, 3 P. M., Eastport, 8 P. M., Bar Harbor, 4 A. M., Bangor, 10 A. M., Tuesday, June 17.

FARES:

To Eastport and return	$3 00
To Digby and return	4 50
To Annapolis and return	5 00
To Halifax and all intermediate stations on W. & A. Railway and return	6.50

Tickets and staterooms for sale by D. Bugbee & Co. On and after Tuesday, June 10th, cabin berths free. Passengers remaining at Annapolis over Sunday can remain on board steamer. Meals 50 cents each.

Steamer Frances will make landings at Winterport and Bucksport, if inducement offer. The route down the Penobscot river and across Penobscot [bay] ... Frenchman's bay will be by daylight. After leaving Bar Harbor the outside voyage will be accomplished during the night, Eastport and Campobello the well known summer resorts in Passamaquoddy Bay, being reached in the morning. The beautiful and interesting scenery of the Bay of Fundy, the remarkable passage called Digby Gut, the celebrated watering place of Digby, the inland sea of Annapolis Basin and Annapolis Royal, Queen of Nova Scotia, will all appear in their finest aspects on the pleasant June morning, (which will be specially provided for the occasion) to delight the American visitors. On Saturday afternoon a train over the Windsor and Annapolis Railway will be provided to take such as wish to Halifax or any intermediate station. This journey, through the valleys of the Annapolis and Cornwallis, the gardens of Nova Scotia, will be one of the most charming features of the trip. The renowned Basin of Minas, Blomidon, the "Village of Grand Pre," the "Land of Evangeline," will present objects of interest more than sufficient to entertain our travelers. Halifax will be reached too soon, but the sights of this old and picturesque English city, novel as entertaining to American eyes, will, to strangers, be the most interesting part of this excursion. Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night will be spent at Halifax and at 7.15 Monday morning the excursion will start, via W. & A. Railway on its return. The return trip will be more interesting and instructive from the slight acquaintance with localities already made, and on Tuesday, A. M. our tourists will disembark at Bangor, unanimously agreed that they have enjoyed the most delightful and satisfactory excursion ever offered to the Bangor public.

CONSTIPATION!

There is no medium through which disease so often attacks the system as by Constipation, and there is no other ill flesh is heir to, more apt to be neglected, from the fact material inconvenience may not be immediately felt from irregular action of the bowels. When there is not regular action the retention of decayed and effete matter, with its poisonous gases, soon poisons the whole system by being absorbed into it, causing piles, fistula, headache, impure blood and many other serious affections. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS will immediately relieve, and one bottle positively cure or relieve any case of Constipation.

"Was troubled for a year with torpid liver and indigestion, and after trying everything imaginable used BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. The first bottle revived me, and the second cured me entirely."—J. S. Williamson, Rochester, N. Y.

RUNAWAY. Yesterday afternoon a horse belonging to Mr. Reuben Hathorn, started from a tie ... leading off of Harlow street, and ran away down Harlow street, striking the top buggy to which he was attached against a tree, badly demolishing it. Cleared from the carriage, with a shaft hanging to him, he dashed down the street at an immense speed, passing through Exchange street to the track of the Maine Central Railroad, which he took and followed up as far as Higgins' wharf on to which he turned and was stopped by a boy without having injured himself in the least. All went on the excursion with the sole purpose of having a good time and they were unanimous in asserting that they had accomplished their object.

THE EXCURSION TO AUGUSTA. The boys who went to Augusta on Friday evening did not get back until five o'clock Saturday morning. They marched up from the depot headed by the Bangor Band and broke column in front of the WHIG office after giving cheers for Blaine, for Logan and for the WHIG. An interesting incident of the Augusta visit was the writing of a campaign song by the Apollo Club on their way to Augusta. They sang it under the gaslight and were called into Mr. Blaine's house when they again sung it at the head of the staircase, and by request of Mrs. Blaine sung it the third time. The boys think Augusta a very wet ... Complaints were made that the streets were not properly lighted.

ART EXHIBITION. The exhibition of Mr. Ewer's paintings still continues at Dakin's art rooms and attracts large numbers of admiring visitors. It is something unprecedented for Bangor to have an exhibition numbering fifty three paintings by a single artist, and when we add to that, a Bangor artist it is indeed something to be proud of. Among the pictures shown are many of great worth, and which have won much praise from critics elsewhere, and among them are some of his celebrated trout pictures acknowledged to be excelled by none, and equalled by few artists in that specialty. Beside these Mr. Ewer has some fine landscapes, from well known localities at our summer resorts, which at once catch the eye, both from their truthful representation of the scenes drawn but for their skillful and just treatment. An opportunity will be given to-morrow afternoon to purchase at auction those not disposed of at private sale. Mr. Ewer is a young artist, and an enthusiast in his chosen profession, and we trust his success in the present exhibition and sale will be such as to encourage him to still greater work in the future.

Barrows, superintendent of the Second Baptist Sunday School, on the subject: The Lord's need of the children; singing by school, recitations by the boys and girls, Duett by Mrs. Bowler and Miss Sweet, "Hear us, Father;" address, by the superintendent, "The Lord's use of small things to accomplish great results;" offering, (for the Sunday School Missionary work of the American Baptist Publication Society); Doxology; Benediction. SECOND BAPTIST SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Thirty-ninth Anniversary.

The Second Baptist Sunday School celebrated their thirty-ninth anniversary last evening at their church on Columbia street. The display of flowers with which the pulpit and church were decorated was one of the largest and finest ever seen in the city, and reflected great credit on the committee of young ladies having it in charge. One striking feature was a bank of lilies of the valley extending entirely around three sides of the pulpit, profuse in fragrant bloom, and interspersed with ferns. Following is the Order of exercises:

Organ voluntary, Invocation, Singing by school, "Pure Delight," page 158, Responsive Service, No. 1, "Pure Delight" page 171, Prayer, Singing by school "Pure Delight," page 150, Secretary's annual report, Obituary notices, Responsive Service, No. 6, "Pure Delight," page 173, Singing by school, "Pure Delight" page 140, Address by Rev. G. B. Ilsley, Pastor, Singing by school "Pure Delight," page 43, Prayer, Singing by school and congregation, Benediction.

The Secretary's annual report showed the total actual membership of the school to be 260, number of classes 29, total attendance during the year 7,044, largest number in attendance 170, smallest 30, average 138. BOWDOIN COLLEGE.

Ivy Day—Base Ball Game—The Regatta—Exercises in the Hall—The Ivy Hop

Our correspondent writes: The Ivy Day exercises of the class of '85 passed off in the excellent manner characteristic of all the undertakings of this class. The weather could not have been more propitious ... both days being perfectly ... but not uncomfortably warm. Thursday morning the base ball game between the Bates nine and the Bowdoins was the chief attraction. The game was very close but was finally won by our nine, the score being six to three.

In the afternoon the field day exercises took place at the Topsham fair grounds. Some of the records were very good but for the most part poorer than those of last year.

Friday morning the annual regatta took place on the river. The first race was between the Juniors and Freshmen, the Juniors coming off victorious, rowing the three mile course in 19 minutes and 11 seconds, the Freshmen's time being 19 minutes and 47 seconds, beating the best Freshman record yet made here. The Junior crew was composed as follows:

Capt. F. H. Brown, Captain, third
E. W. Alexander, stroke
J. C. Hall, second
F. W. Davis, bow
C. H. Wardwell, coxswain

FRESHMEN CREW

M. H. Boutelle, captain, third
E. B. Varney, stroke
C. F. Moulton, second
S. W. Merrill, bow

The Freshmen pulled well and were highly complimented by all at the success in their first race.

The second race between the University crew and the Dirigos of Portland was won by the former. The Bowdoin crew pulled in fine form and won an apparently easy victory. The Portlands pulled well but were unable to steer their boat. On Friday afternoon the exercises were conducted by the class in Memorial Hall. After the audience was seated the class marched in and took seats upon the stage. At the conclusion of a magnificently rendered piece by Grimmer's orchestra the president of '85, Mr. Folsom arose and introduced their chaplain, M. H. Purling, then Mr. J. A. Peters was next introduced. Class orator Mr. Peters rendered his oration in a manner highly creditable to himself and class. W. R. Butler the class poet was next introduced to the audience. His poem was excellent and showed careful preparation. The audience next adjourned to the north side of Kings Chapel, where the presentation of honors took place: Best moustache, W. P. Nealley; Dig, J. F. Libbey; Lazy Man, W. C. Kendall; Philosopher, O. R. Cook; Dude, C. H. Farr; Popular Man, W. M. Eames.

The Ivy Hop took place in the evening, and about thirty couple were present beside a large audience in the gallery of the hall.

The officers of '85 are as follows: President, L. B. Folsom; H. N. Dunham, Curator; Committee, N. B. Ford, W. P. Nealley, A. W. Rogers.

Insect Pests.

...es from Bulletin No. 9, issued by the Massachusetts Agricultural Experiment Station.]

...terded preparations are being made ... form in use of the harmless materials ... may be used in destroying insects ... ous to farm and garden crops. As the ... results cannot be presented to the ... in time to be of use the early part ... this season, a brief statement is given ... he remedies thus far found to be the ... successful.

Cabbage Flea.—The first insect of importance that appears is the small, black flea ... jumping beetle that attacks the cabbage, radish, turnip, etc. Dusting with ... green mixed with one hundred times ... weight of plaster has proved an effectual remedy. This must be done when ... plants are wet and after every rain.

...at Worm.—The cut worm, of which ... are several species, including the ... worm, works only during the night, ... may be destroyed by the same remedy ... the above. We would advise a trial of ... powder mixed with five times ... bulk of plaster as being more safe, ... though we have no positive proof that it ... be effectual.

...triped Squash Bug. The striped ... bug, which has been so abundant ... the past two seasons, is best kept at ... by the use of plaster and Paris ... For the family garden the safest ... most satisfactory way to overcome ... is to make a bottomless box twelve ... square and six or eight inches deep, ... with mosquito netting. One ... these boxes placed over each hill until ... plants have become tough and hard ... protection.

...e Potato Beetle. The potato beetle ... evidently become a permanent resident ... us. Paris green extended with ... flour, or water, is the only cheap ... easily-applied remedy known at present, ... great care must be exercised ... and especially in the place where the ... is kept, that it may not get upon ... food or utensils. Cabbage Worm. The cabbage worm, ... larva of the common white butterfly, ... is ... destroyed in several ways. ... of hand picking, it begun before the ... brood has passed into its perfect ... is effectual. ...se Bug. The rose bug has thus ... been the most difficult to overcome of ... tribe of injurious insects, and ... recommend no remedy with great ... of confidence, but would advise ... trial of the ... of ... held under ... every evening while ... grapes are in ... it is ... to them, and ... carefully ... the plant.

...ose Slugs. This insect is easily destroyed by spraying with water and ... at the rate of one tablespoonful of ... to a pailful of the former.

...tomato plants ... have browned ... tops of young potato plants just ... forth above the surface of the ground. ... no injury will be done as there ... plenty of new buds below the surface ... the season is favorable the abundance ... these new shoots may make a greater ... of tubers than the original ... have given.

...ive the milch cows a little hay at the ... right and a little grain. The feed ... be abundant in the pasture, but it is ... and succulent that it ... the ... of milk greatly and often at the expense of flesh of the animal. If they ... will take more grain to ... up to the fall than it would to keep up ... they have now.

...bor Day, which has within two years ... recognized institution in the ... of Quebec, has already been the ... of much benefit, as this spring ... 150,000 trees were planted on that ... It has attracted much attention ... study of forestry and interested many, ... school children. If one ... devoted to statute labor on the high... were devoted to tree planting the ... accruing would be very great.

...n the orchard there is much to be done ... month. It is a good time to prune ... trees, especially when they are inclined to make too much growth of wood. ... now checks the growth somewhat, but tends to develop the fruit buds ... another year, for the benefit of the ... year's crop, this month is probably ... best time to prune the trees. Wounds ... in pruning this month heal over ... rapidly, and usually leave a sound ... If fine fruit it for home use or market ... desired, thin out about one-half or two-... of the fruit on those trees that have ... full. Usually one-third of the fruit ... bring more than the whole owing to ... better size. If the farmer does not attend to this, nature does, by causing a ... share to drop before reaching maturity; but before it has done that the whole ... has become of inferior size, by reason of a lack of sufficient nutriment to perfect so many specimens. Young trees are often severely injured by too heavy bearing, as they cannot recover from the overwork in season to make the fruit and leaf buds for the next year.

There is time after apples have blossomed and the fruit has set to mulch the trees with decided benefit to the crop. The manure should be spread on the surface as far as the roots extend, preferably in bearing orchards midway between the rows. Potash is especially valuable for perfecting fruits, especially those containing seed enclosed in stones. In a rainy season this manure is more effective, but however dry it may be the manure will keep the soil moister by acting as a mulch and preventing evaporation.
